

Firenock Review by Randy Wildasin, 9th September 2008
Firenock GSH (GS)

This year my friends will tell you that I have been a lighted nock test bed for every single one that exists on the market and I have learned a lot and currently only use one brand of lighted nock and you guessed it; the FIRENOCK.

I had used Lumenocks to start and while they are OK I developed a callus on my thumb and pointer finger from wiggling the Lumenock to shut it off. I had multiple failures where I had I guess slid it out to far and the nock did not depress all the way to turn it on or I pulled it out and it would light back up because I had not pulled it far enough. Hassle is all I got.

Then I tried tracers and it was much of the same as there was magnet to mount and they were extremely dim from what I had used and after about 30 arrows the magnet went into the woods and nocks into the trash can.

However with the Firenock it consistently lit and provided the best results that I could have hoped for. I will continue to buy Firenocks and will be buying six more as soon as the new dozen arrows I have being built are done.

At that point I will have a full dozen with lighted Firenocks and the other dozen with the practice nocks on. Hopefully as soon as I get some video of an actual hunting situation using them I will pass that along as well.

Once again thanks for building a quality product and making hunters feel like there is actually a product out there that you can feel like you got your money's worth when you bought it. I just wish it would not have cost me a couple hundred bucks to find that out ;)

Thanks,

Randy Wildasin
Technical Service Engineer
NET TAC