

Firenock Review by Mark Nichols, 11th August 2009
Firenock GS in bowfishing

I purchased the FIRENOCK lighted nock system last year in November, so therefore I can say I have had them for almost a full year. The product works great, even during a hard impact situation. The only thing that I would honestly change is the arrows that I put them on. Yes I like them that well, it's just a little difficult to apply them to my bowfishing arrows. The nock is very vibrantly lit, much brighter than the competition. I might also add that the actual plastic nock is very durable, cause as any bowfisher should know, nocks don't last long. There is one last thing that I might change, that is a blink rate after impact. I would like the nock to have a very fast blink rate after impact. This is for those lost arrows in the water, these nocks are a good investment that I don't want to loose, and I believe that a fast blink rate would really help with that.
